Comments of Franco Borgogno.

Aimed at: SBPRJ members and candidates in training, psychologists and psychoanalysts close to our institutions, graduated students.

Advertising

Posters, banners and an electronic flyer were designed for the advertising of the activities. They were distributed in Universities and health institutions. The banner and the electronic flyer were distributed among social media, SBPRJ website and Facebook account. The publicit was done by the Scientific Department under the direction of Wania M. C.F. Cidade (Director of Scientific SBPRJ) and the press advisor contracted by SBPRJ and achieved the expected result. As a consequence of the event, we had several publications in blogs, websites and Facebooks of other institutions. Registrations were well above expectations and reached the limit of places available for the event, generating a waiting list.

Program reception

The program of activities had a positive reception that was evidenced in the number of people who attended them and mainly in the rich exchange that took place between Dr Franco Borgogno and participants. Registrations were well above expectations and reached the limit of places available for the event, generating a waiting list. We had a significant audience counting with psychoanalysts of several psychoanalytic societies of Rio de Janeiro, students of mental health not from our institution and students of the institute SBPRJ. The program was received positively and emphasized the opportunity to better know the history of the psychoanalytic movement and the revolutionary and current thinking of Sandor Ferenczi.

Impact and consequences for our institution and community

We believe this was an important and enriching experience for the whole members of SBPRJ and also to involve the educational community and those devoted to mental health. It was evident the increasing interest in the work of Ferenczi and a demand for a course that studies the mentioned author. The candidates showed a lot of enthusiasm about being able to discuss their ideas formulated from reading Ferenczi's Clinic Journal. This model of discussion (presentation of students's papers to an external member of another nationality), unprecedented in our institution, seemed to be extremely profitable and generated an intense and rich debate among those present.

Recommendations for other societies based on our experience

The activities with Franco Borgogno really brought many benefits both individually and institutionally as well.
